"MERTZ'S" MODERN IDEAS.

Mediocrity always copies superiority. You never hear us quoting some other tailor. Our make of garments are the standard from which others take their cases. We propose to be ver in advance and you can feel assured that by our modern method you get the best tailoring effects at a modicum or cost. $25 does seem a low price for a suit of our influitable make, but then we are tailoring hundreds of them and are satisfied with a small manyin of profit.

Alex. Dabney stood in front of No. 1721 or 1719, while Mr. Finley stood opposite. Young Mr. Darrell, who sat in the parlor of No. 1737, sat within a few feet of the shooting. He heard the shots distinctly. He heard five and no more. Taking the revolver found by Frank Hamlink's body, the district attorney illustrated the manner of the shots by pulling the hammer down five times in rapid succession and asked the jury if it sounded like five distinct shots or like a pack of firecrackers, as the defense would have every one believe. He then discussed the witnesses who testified for trasting their standing and non-interest with dirty newspaper—dirty because of its con-tents—to show Mr. Walbridge an attack on Col. Hamlink in it. But Mr. Walbridge was a different man from Dr. Gibbs. Mr. Walbridge could not be induced to lie. CHARACTER OF WITNESSES CONTRASTED. The district attorney then rapidly recited the names of the more prominent witnesses living on Q street between 17th and 18th who had testified to the fact that there were but five shots. There were thirty-three people living in that radius who had so testified, and it was not possible that so many of intelligence and worth would testify to such a thing in a case where a man's life was at stake if it were not Judge Wilson had claimed that none peculiar mind would disbelieve that Pets nied his master because the Scriptures disomewhat as to the number of times the rowed. That was true, but in discussing logary's testimony as to where had sworn that the defendant had a pistol in his band when he crossed over to her after the shooting he did not throw his pistol away and that, therefore, the pistol found in the street must have been Frank Hamlink's. But the defendant had two pistols with him on other occasions, and he undoubtedly had two with him that night, for he was too much of a coward and far too sharp and calculating not to be so provided. As he ran he threw one and then took the other from his pocket.

EYEWITNESSES OF THE SHOOTING The district attorney then took up the test mony of the seven eyewitnesses to the shootthey all agree to one fact—that the man who did the shooting was the man who ran away. That man the defendant admitted, was himself. But it is more than probable that he thought parties, the district attorney said it was but natural for them to differ somewhat, but they had not differed as to any material fact. And unless the defendant was convicted, it would be saying to every man who had a grudge against another, go out on the street, pull your revolver and shoot him down. Then, all that would be necessary to acquithim, although the deed was seen by thirty or more people, would be to bring into court five or six who would testify that the shots sounded like firecrackers and that there were two pistois fired. powder marks could never have lodged on the sleeve under the arm. He closed his remarks for the day at 4:30 by impressing upon the minds of the jury the fact that Mrs. Schneider had cried out immediately the firing ceased: "My God, Howard Schneider has killed Frank and shot me." She never afterward contradicted that statement. She was the one who could best know of what she spoke and was it reasonable to even imagine that, standing just before the veil which intervened between this and the next world, when about to give an account to her maker of her life. to give an account to her maker of he here, she would utter an untruth? THE VERDICT.
